SWISS INSURANCE PROPOSITION.

Consul General Dubois Tells Why It Was Defeated.

In a report to the State Department Coninteresting facts about the proposed Swiss accident and military insurance law. This sul General Dubois at S law, which was recently defeated by a two-thirds vote, prescriber obligatory insurance in cases of sickness and accident. The government's share of the expense of the entire premium of the insurance was to be 20 per cent, the labor 20 per cent, while the employers of labor were to bear 60 per The text of the proposed law contained 400 articles, among which was the military insurance clause, which met considerable opposition by the military classes. The project was defeated this time by 195,-000 votes. Glarus was the only province out of the twenty-two cantons which gave a majority in favor of the proposition.

There are various causes which helped to lefeat this measure. In agricultural districts it was considered to be of advantage to the industrial centers. Great dissatis-faction was shown by the people engaged in Louse industries, because the law was made compulsory for some and optional for made compulsory for some and optomation others. Strong opposition was met with among the large manufacturers, especially those of the slik industre, because they were convinced that the law would tax them heavier than they were being taxed under the compulsory system which is at present in existence.

What Shall We Have tor Dessert?

There are several reasons. "Government messages, are, of course, transmitted in cipher. This cipher code is intricate and known to but few; in fact, there are several clerks in the War, State, above. It is in cipher. The operator receives merely a lot of words without consecutive connection or meaning to him. He goes it blind as far as accuracy is concerned. He ticks it off to Hong Kong, to the cable station. The English have two complete cables from Hong Kong to London, by relays, as I will describe. From Hong Kong the dispatch is sent to Singapore either by way of Labuan, on the Island of Borneo, or by the Cochin China relay. At Singapore it is sent to the next relay station at Penang, also on the Malay peninsula. It then penetrates India, being caught up at Madras and hurried on to Bombay. From thence it files to Aden, in Arabia, to be put on the cable to Suez, Africa. It then speeds toward Europe via Malta, Gibraltar, Lisbon and finally winding up on that side of the hemisphere at the central office in London. From thence it siticked to New York, to be once more transcribed and sent to Washington.

"The dispatch has, consequently, been transcribed and sent to Washington.

"The dispatch has, consequently, been transcribed and sent to Washington.

"The reasonable, therefore, that a code dispatch handled by so many different hands and in different countries, even assuming that all of the operators are English, should be a little the worse for wear when it reaches the big pile of granite on Pennsylvania avenue. A lengthy dispatch in correct intelligible English sentences might have a few words transposed or improperly given, but the sense could be determined. I can understand how a code message with mixed and missing words would make the experts here sweat real blood to translate it.

Pittsburg has been playing exceptionally fine ball of late and with Manager Clarke and the twirlers in good shape the Pirates will just about shove the Phillies out of second place before the western series ends. Should the western end of the National League continue its present rapid order of ball the race for the championship will be unusually close. New York, of course, is out of it, but a prolonged spurt by anyone of the other seven clubs will send it or one of the other seven clubs will send it or teep it up at the head of the procession. Ketcham played middle field for Connie Mack's Milwaukee team Monday and had three hits out of four times at bat. Ketcham also won Saturday's game for Mack, and if records count for anything Col. Dreyfuss has unearthed another winner.

"Any team that goes to Cincinnati and expects to have an easy time of it is going to be badly fooled," remarked Manager Selee. "The Reds have played the best ball against us that I have ever known them to against us that I have ever known them to put up. They are playing the game for all there is in it. It is a fast hustling team."

Members of the Boston team think that effort to catch Barrett at third, held the bail and Barrett and Corcoran had to be credited with a double steal, which was really not intended. An experienced catcher would, in all probability, have nailed Barrett at third, for he did not have an exceptionally good lead, and the Reds' chances for victory would have been decidedly slim. That play did much to win the Reds the game. Beckley was given credit for having made a heady play, but the fact that Sullivan made a very stupid one was entirely overlooked.

CHAMPIONSHIP GOLF.

Travis Defeats Watson and Sixteen Contestants Drop Out.

Sixteen of the thirty-two golfers who qualified Monday for amateur championship onors found themselves outside the charmed circle yesterday afternoon when the first match play competition was finished on the Garden City, L. I., links. In those who dropped out no severe shocks to golfing predictions were experienced, except, pos-sibly in the case of Robert C. Watson, jr., the young Westbrook crack, who has de veloped this season a beautifully finished the young Westbrook crack, who has developed this season a beautifully finished and steady style.

Watson had a large number of friends on the links, and they tramped faithfully in his wake twice over the long 6,134-yard course. It was a source of disappointment to many that the two leaders in Monday's medal play round, Travis and Watson, should be drawn together so early in the tournament. The top-notchers have to come together sooner or later, however, and the Travis-Watson match added just that excitement to the games necessary to round out the championship element in the tournament. In the afternoon close to 500 persons followed the game, and they saw some grand golf, although not so brilliant as characterized the morning round. Travis won on the thirty-fifth green by 2 up and 1 to play.

A weaker man than Watson would have felt defeat in his bones when the afternoon round began, but the Westbrook youth showed nobly what a grand golfer he is, and on the first seven holes he cut the lead down to one. Excitement fairly bolled, in a figurative sense, for the monotonous silence that hovers over a golf match is often fearfully depressing to a typical sport. Travis advanced to a lead of two by a remarkable 3 on the tenth green, 344 yards. Watson cut in to one on the fourteenth. On the sixteenth he lost an apparent chance to win the hole from a poor put, and Travis, hitting Watson's ball, luckily carromed off into the hole.

The friends of Allan Kennaday, the Mont-

The friends of Allan Kennaday, the Mont-The friends of Allan Kennaday, the Mont-clair golfer, who jumped so prominently to the front in the Metropolitan championship, were slightly jarred to find that E. M. Byers, one of Yale's ablest golfers, won the match by one hole. It was the closest of the day, and the game was a hot one throughout, for at the end of the morning round honors were even. Herbert M. Harriman, the present cham-pionship holder, had to fight for his vic-tory, for Louis Livingston, jr., another member of Westbrook's brilliant young co-terie, played a game that was not easy to terie, played a game that was not easy to beat. Harriman was only 1 ahead in the morning, but finally won by 3 up and 2 to Harriman's 36 in the afternoon for the first nine holes establishes a record for that distance. It is three strokes under bogey, and shows that Harriman has not lost his championship grip.

Harry Hollins, jr., the interscholastic champion, had a stiff match with Tiffany Richardson of Harvard, before the former could win by two holes.

As a result of the day's play the western representatives have moved as far east as Cleveland and Scranton, represented, respectively, by T. S. Becharth and John H. Brooks. The defeat of Stuart Stickney by William McCawley of Philadelphia removed the last far-westerner from the event. J.

William McCawley of Philadelphia removed the last far-westerner from the event. J. G. Thorpe lost the tie-off for the last place, but the other two Bostonians, A. G. Lockwood and Quincy Shaw, won their games, Lockwood defeating A. L. Norris of Dyke's Meadow by 4 up and 3 to play. Findlay Douglas put Reginald Brooks out of the race by 5 up and 4 to play, while James A. Tyng and J. G. Averell of Harvard won their matches.

TENNIS EXPERTS.

Hall Defeats Larned in Middle States Tournament.

The middle states championship lawn tennis tournament was continued at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club grounds, Orange, N. J.,

The feature of the day was the victory of E. L. Hall over W. A. Larned in the first round of the championship singles. Larned was thought to be almost invincible this spring, but he met his Waterloo at the hands of the veteran crack, who made his reappearance in tournament play three weeks ago, when he won the New Jersey weeks ago, when he won the New Jersey state championship.

Hall lost the first set by 6-2, and in the second Larned led up to 4-2. Hall finally pulled out the second set, after Larned had been within a game of it at 5-4. In the third set Hall's play became still more aggressive. In the lead he held the advantage up to 5-2. Then Larned made one last effort to turn the tide of defeat, and after winning the next two games, came within a stroke of tying the score at 5-all. Hall was too steady for him, and his nerve held on to the end, finally winning by 6-1.
E. P. Fischer was beaten in straight sets by Holcomb Ward of Harvard.

CHARENTUS DEFEATS IMP.

Great Race in Which the Lightweight Horse Finishes First.

Imp and Rush, the fastest mares of the met at Sheepshead Bay yesterday. Imp had the top weight, 130 pounds, in the Long Island handicap, one mile and a furlong, with Rush carrying the next weight, 118 pounds, and they started favorites in the order named. Rush ran disappointingly, but Imp, though beaten, performed with all the speed and gamene that has made her famous, and racing in that has made her famous, and racing in the first division to the end, was barely beaten by a horse to whom she was conceding thirty-one pounds, Charentus, six years old, with only ninety-nine pounds, barely lasting long enough to beat her out a half length. The start was long delayed, and the starter's so-called "assistants" worried Imp, Charentus and Grayfeld, a man to each horse, until they were almost distracted.

man to each horse, until they were almost distracted.

Imp, with her heavy weight, had all the worst of the delay. In addition, a high wind was blowing, and further hampered the great old black mare. When the flag finally fell, Grayfeld and Charentus made a rush for the lead, but Imp went with them, and, running lapped with the lightweighted Charentus from the turn into the backstretch, hung with him to the end. Through the stretch both were hard ridden. Grayfeld then closing in on them, but with all the task of pacemaking, Imp and Charentus still held him off, and in a most exciting finish the three passed the winning citing finish the three passed the winning post half length apart, Charentus first, Imp second, and Grayfeld third. The time was a second slower than the track record, but, a second slower than the track record, but, considering the delay at the post, the wind, and the weight she carried, Imp's race was a most remarkable one.

Shaw, the jockey under engagement to George E. Smith (Pittsburg Phil), rode three winners in Kamara, Charentus and Flora, and the betting ring was agog with excitement over Smith's winnings, the plunger having backed all three horses. Smith only admitted that he had enjoyed a "good day," but the men in the ring estimated his profits at from $60,000 to $75,000.

A Telegrapher's Suggestions as to Errors in Transmission. cials have experienced much difficulty in leciphering some of the messages received from our diplomatic agents and naval officers in the Chinese station. In fact, one or two were reported to be so mixed and mutilated as to be quite unintelligible save there are several clerks in the War, State, Navy departments, respectively, who are known as cipher code experts, and if these men can't make out the intelligibility of the words of the dispatch, they were pretty thoroughly jumbled en route, or else the code is excessively intricate, or both.

"Let us follow a dispatch from Tien Tsin. Suppose it should read: 'Long, Washington, It is imperative that a brigade of troops and a powerful fleet of war vessels be sent at once. Our forces repulsed with heavy loss. Act quickly."

"This dispatch is filled at Tien Tsin as above. It is in cipher. The operator receives merely a lot of words without consecutive connection or meaning to him.

mutitated as to be quite unintelligible save for a few sentences. Naturally this places the government in an embarrassing position, as it is of the first importance that such messages should be received and when received deciphered and read with the utmost dispatch.

"The public has undoubtedly wondered, since these incomplete dispatches have been given out so often why it is that the messages cannot be transmitted correctly. There are several reasons.

"It may be of Interest to know that the rate per word from here to Hong Kong is $1.63. A rebate of 12½ cents per word is allowed the go 'nnment.
"Another cau. for delay and error is that at present the cables to China are crowded with dispatches to and from on private and official business from all countries. I don't suppose that a governmental code could be devised into which errors could not creep."

there is in it. It is a fast hustling team."

Members of the Boston team think that there are too many managers connected with the St. Louis team ever to make it a success. "With Tebeau, McGraw and Donovan," said a Beanaster, "the team has three men who have handled managerial reins, and each had a different way of handling them, each thinking that his way was the right one."

Clarke Griffith of the Chicago team certainly has pitched some grand ball of late. There seems to be one team in the league which he fails to fool on his own grounds, and that team is the Cincinnatis. Allen's men have driven Griffith to the bench on two occasions. In the last two weeks he has recorded two grand victories. He beat Pittsburg in a fourteen-inning game by a score of 1 to 0, and won by the same score from Brooklyn in nine innings.

Counting all college games played as well as the quality of the games Princeton has fairly won first place in the college base ball world for the season of 1900. The Tigers won 19 of the 22 games played, beating Georgetown twice, Yale twice. Cornell twice, Harvard, Holy Cross, Brown, Fordham, Lehigh, Columbia, Lafayette, Manhattan and Virginia once each, besides taking numerous other college teams into camp. Georgetown, with twenty victories out of twenty-four games, including one draw, ranks second, to "Princeton, while Harvard, Yale, Holy, Cross and Pennsylvania follow, all with good records, but none escaped a shut-out."

quite as creditable as Princeton. Pennsylvania of all the big college teams alone escaped a shut-out.
It appears to matter little what you do in base ball, so long as you get away with it. Proper plays are semetimes hissed when they fall to bring about the desired result, while stupid plays are applauded and the players who make them given credit for head work. The spectators only look for results in base ball. For instance, in the ninth inning of Monday's game at Cincinnati Jake Beckley might, have caused disaster and effectively checked the Reds' raily had Catcher Sullyan been wide awake. With Barrett and Corcoran on second and first respectively, Nighols had three balls on Beckley, when he cut the plate with a straight one. Before the ball reached the plate Jake threw down his bat and started for first as if he had gained a base on balls. Barrett and Corcoran, seeing him start for first, naturally began to advance to third and second respectively. Terry called it a strike and Sullivan, instead of making an
